Bio

Jerry Kaba received a BFA from Rowan University (2006) and an MFA from Tyler School of Art/ Temple University in Ceramics and Glass (2008). He currently teaches at Moore College of Art and Design and is the Ceramics Area Head at Montclair State University.

In 2012 Kaba founded an artist-run exhibition space in Philadelphia – Practice – that caters to performing and installation artwork. Practice brings in artists from Philadelphia, but more often, national and international artists, promoting a broader artistic exchange to Philadelphia's art community.

His works range from small-scale objects to large-scale installation/performance art. Kaba's work often explores a wide range of themes from religious practice to professional wrestling and everything in between.
